Summary of key findings for parents

This provision is outstanding

- Highly effective arrangements for recruiting new staff, alongside regular supervision and rigorous performance management, are highly effective at helping management to ensure any development areas are tackled through targeted training. Staff are extremely well supported in their ongoing professional development.
- The manager and staff have an excellent understanding of the developmental needs of all children, including those who have special educational needs and those learning English as an additional language. All children make excellent progress in their learning.
- Staff are highly skilled at increasing children's awareness of diversity and use simple explanations to develop their awareness of similarities and differences. Children are encouraged extremely well to respect and value one another.
- Children are highly motivated to learn. Staff are extremely successful in supporting children's emotional development. Children develop excellent independence skills and confidence. Staff prepare children extremely well for their move to school.
- The manager and staff have exceptionally warm and secure attachments to the children. They encourage children to choose activities to help them become highly motivated learners.

What the setting needs to do to improve further

To further improve the quality of the early years provision the provider should:

- strengthen the opportunities for children to use technology, and develop their understanding of the world even further.

Inspection activities

- The inspector viewed the premises and sampled some documentation.
- The inspector observed the manager and staff interacting with children.

Inspection findings

Effectiveness of the leadership and management is outstanding

The manager and staff have an excellent understanding of their responsibilities to safeguard children. Staff implement policies and safe working practices exceptionally well to support children's health, safety and well-being. Safeguarding is effective. Extremely thorough assessment of children's information and meticulous planning means that any potential need is recognised and met very quickly. For example, staff quickly assessed a child who has special educational needs and implemented a development plan sharing strategies that had a positive impact on learning and shared these strategies with school. The manager is highly effective at evaluating the provision and staff practice. Since the last inspection she has enhanced how staff extend children's problem-solving and critical thinking skills extremely well. For example, staff ask children challenging questions then ask them to 'test' their findings to strengthen their knowledge.

Quality of teaching, learning and assessment is outstanding

Staff are able to sharply focus activities exceptionally well and adapt them to each child's individual needs. For example, when reading a story, staff stimulate children's interests very effectively. They use different voices and gestures, puppets and props to interest younger children. Staff consistently extend on children's language skills very well, for instance, as they use rhyming words, such as bricks and sticks. Older children are supported exceptionally well to build on skills for future learning. For example, through additional activities, such as cookery club, football club and pyjama drama club. However, resources to consistently extend their knowledge of technology are slightly less evident. Staff extend vocabulary very well and during lunch explain to children why a serviette is used. Staff teach children exceptionally well about mathematical concepts. For instance, they learn how to estimate during a sorting activity and learn how to add and subtract.

Personal development, behaviour and welfare are outstanding

Children's health and well-being are meaningfully enhanced by the excellent teaching of care and hygiene practices. For example, staff model how to brush teeth properly and enhance children's understanding of oral health. Children have a very good understanding of how to keep themselves healthy. For instance, they know a healthy lunch is made up of 'rainbow' colours. Staff are exemplary role models. Children's behaviour is excellent. For example, children play and cooperate exceptionally well. They share and take turns without adult support. Staff support children extremely well to become independent, for example, children persevere when trying to do up zips.

Outcomes for children are outstanding

Children are continually motivated to build on their learning. For example, their knowledge of shapes is reinforced as staff encourage them to find similar shapes in the environment. Children learn excellent communication skills and lead their own play, and choose from the wide variety of inspiring and interesting resources. Children's physical skills develop extremely well. For example, they play on the wide assortment of large equipment outside and practise their coordination and balancing skills on wooden blocks.
